

The search for award-winning images of Concord Pacific Place's innovative past and vision for the future has concluded and the winners of Reflections and Projections Photo and Imaging Contest are...

December, Vancouver: Celebrating two decades of Concord Pacific Place—the ground-breaking master-planned community on the Expo 86 lands at North False Creek—Concord Pacific Group launched a community photo and imaging contest to commemorate the milestone. Last night at a reception held at The Concord Pacific Presentation Center, the winners were announced and over $16,000 in prizes were awarded by one of the esteemed contest judges, Erin Cebula and Concord Pacific President, Terry Hui. And the winners are:

In attendance at the event was a host of Vancouver's architectural and development world including: Arthur Erickson, Peter Busby, James Cheng, Richard Henriquez, Walter Francl and Larry Beasley. Also there were Vancouver's former Mayor, Philip Owen and new Mayor, Gregor Robertson.

The themes of the contest were split between 'reflection'—looking back on the past 20 years' evolution of Concord Pacific Place—and 'projection', which creatively explored the community's future development. Both categories attracted a wide range of photographs and images.

The contest was judged by esteemed Architect Arthur Erickson, TV host Erin Cebula, Advertising Icon Frank Palmer and former Canucks owner Arthur Griffiths.
